SOCWK360- Research in Social Science Video Blog Assignment

This week, we learned about three primary quantitative research designs: experimental, quasi-experimental, and pre-experimental. For this assignment aligning with this week's learning, you will pretend you are a video blogger hosting a blog related to studying for a research methods class. Create a video in which you help students understand the three quantitative research designs we learned about this week. Provide an accurate description of the key features of each design, as well as an example of what a study using each design type would look like.

Record your video and upload it here. You may use whatever technology tools you have available to upload your video to the assignment box. This assignment is worth 30 points, broken down as follows:

- 15 points: Accurately describing each of the three design types
- 15 points: Giving an accurate example of how a study using each design type would look

Total possible points: 30
